

Irate residents protest new condominium project

By DINAH ROSE
Staff Writer

More than 20 irate residents attended Thursday's planning commission meeting in Upland to protest approval of a new condominium project which included provisions for the future closing of a portion of 24th Street.

Discussion of the project was continued from the commission's November meeting to allow developers time to make changes in the plans in accordance with requests from city staff.

The main concern of residents of the area attending the meeting was the placement of two units flush with what is now the edge of 24th Street, Upland.

The city's general plan specifies that the city will at some time create an additional north-south route to share some of the load on the already congested Mountain Avenue. If the plan is eventually put into effect, the section of 24th Street now intersecting Mountain Avenue would be terminated in a cul-de-sac.

City planners requested the firm of Orchard Terrace Inc., developers of the project, to include part of the current right-of-way in the development. A temporary road connecting the cul-de-sac and Mountain Avenue would then be constructed roughly 20 feet north of its current location.

City Engineer Fred Blanchard said even if the general plan was never enacted and 24th Street not closed off, the resulting curve in the road would be desirable to slow down traffic as it approached the intersection.

Many of the residents attending the meeting live in county land west of the development, and use 24th Street as a primary access route to Mountain Avenue.

They said the placement of the two units virtually on the side of the current roadway would make it impossible to return the street to its former condition, that is, continuing in a straight line to Mountain.

During a break following the discussion, many of the residents voiced confusion as to whether their anger should be directed at the developers, or at the city's planning and engineering departments.

Bill Uhl, architect for the project, said "We made the drawings like this because we thought we were conforming to the general plan." Original drawings submitted to the planning department had the offending two units within lot lines.

Commissioner John Zinda asked Blanchard, "So we aren't vacating the street for the benefit of the developer?"

Blanchard replied they were not, to his knowledge.

The city's general plan, adopted in 1976, calls for a reworking of the roadways in the northwestern part of the city, but Blanchard pointed out that any street closures or other major changes would have to go before a public hearing before any action was taken. The placement of the two condominiums and curving of 24th Street would make it possible to conform to the general plan in the future if necessary.

The project itself, according to Uhl, has been designed to appeal to "middle-aged and older" couples whose children are grown, and are looking for luxurious accommodations with minimal bedrooms and large open spaces. The units, ranging from one to three bedrooms, begin at 2,003 square feet and starting prices are estimated to range from $125,000 to $130,000 per unit.

Church organist retires after 28 years of service

Story and

Marge Gross

As a youngster, the first tune Elinor Wilding figured out on the piano was "Jesus Lover of My Soul."

This may have been prophetic of her major career since the Upland woman has officially retired as organist of the First Presbyterian Church, Upland, after 28 years of service.

Mrs. Wilding started piano lessons when 8 years old. She learned to play the organ on the organ now in Gardiner Spring Auditorium at Chaffey High School.

"The organ was in the auditorium that pre-dated Gardiner Spring," Mrs. Wilding said. "The pipes were in boxes near the organ and it was a beautiful instrument."

When the organ was moved into Gardiner Spring, the musician said the pipes had been put in the ceiling. "It's terrible now," she said. "I played it when it was first put in and I couldn't hear because the sound had too long to travel."

While a student at Chaffey High School, Mrs. Wilding played for assemblies and for the glee clubs of the high school and Chaffey College. She played for Florence and Earle Blakeslee and continued on after graduating.

"I still see people who asked, 'Aren't you the one who played for the Blakeslees?' I played for them from 1925 until 1941."

Over the years she also played for the First Christian Church, the First Baptist Church and the Christian Science Church in Ontario. She also worked for several years as a secretary in Pomona.

Elinor married William Wilding and became the mother of Fred and Byron, both teachers, and Chrislee, a mentally handicapped child who has been at Lanterman State Hospital since she was 4 1/2 years old.

In recent years, Mrs. Wilding has played for musicals directed by Ralph Strane and Art Sheppard at Chaffey College.

Elinor Wilding did not continue in a music career after high school, "because the Depression hit and there was no money to study — so I stayed here and played."

Mrs. Wilding said, "As I look back, I think I'd rather be myself and do what I've done. I know so many people and have played in so many things — I learned from variety."

Since she was 18, Mrs. Wilding has been giving piano lessons. Currently, she has 18 students. The musician does not think it is ever too late to learn the piano.

"I enjoy teaching, but I enjoy playing more," she said. "I'm miserable away from the piano."

Though she prefers the piano over the organ, Mrs. Wilding did like playing at the First Presbyterian Church. Asked if in her 28 years she ever made any major errors, she laughed and said, "Once after the offertory, my mind and hands drifted, and instead of playing the doxology, I broke into 'My Country 'Tis of Thee —' but I recovered quickly."

Another time, "I played the wrong hymn and above the organ, Dick Mitchell — he was the minister then — yelled at me. 'Elinor, you're playing the wrong hymn.' " she said. Her recovery was quick. "Playing the organ for a church service is stress," she said. "The only rest you get is during the sermon."

Now retired, Mrs. Wilding plans some rest yet she will continue doing many things she enjoys — giving lessons, playing once a week in the mental health unit at San Antonio Community Hospital as a volunteer and for the Upland Kiwanis Club meetings each week, a job of joy she's been doing for 18 years.

Upland planners ok plan limiting commercial uses

The Upland Planning Commission completed five months of work Thursday night as they approved an amendment to the general plan allowing limited retail commercial uses on land zoned light industrial.

The amendment states retail businesses may be allowed in light industrial zones as long as they do not generate excessive pedestrian or automobile traffic or in other ways interfere with the proper conduct of industrial operations.

George Robins, representing the Economic Development Committee of the Upland Chamber of Commerce, said the plan is more enforceable than an earlier proposal to limit retail use of industrial zones to businesses whose sales do not exceed 25 percent of the gross volume sales.

"This is as close as we've been to actually stating what is on the street," he said. "And that's our goal, to align the situation and laws."

A planning department report pointed out there are indeed several retail businesses not connected to an industrial operation currently operating, that are "harmless" to surrounding resolution.

After lengthy discussion, the commission voted to deny the request, with Chairman John Meyer not in concurrence. The hope was expressed that some policy might be established to discipline developers who propose one set of plans to the city and potential buyers, and then change.

Planning Associate Steve Kabel announced the environmental impact reports on the Upland Country Club have been distributed to concerned parties, and the date of Feb. 4 has been set as deadline to receive all comments.

The project, proposed by Matreyek Homes, Inc., of Upland, will cover 226 acres and include an 18-hole golf course lined by 556 condominiums. The $75 million planned community would be located on both sides of 16th Street east of Campus Avenue.

Ruttmans' lives center on race track

By MARGE GROSS
Staff Writer

Harpo is married to Cookie Monster and they have three daughters, One, Two and Three.

Those are the names which have been attached to the Ruttman family of Upland for some obvious reasons.

Joe Ruttman is a race car driver, a member of a famous racing family. When he wins a race, Joe eats cookies instead of drinking the traditional champagne. He never touches alcoholic beverages. Due to his cookie craze, fans have labeled him the Cookie Monster.

Harpo's real name is Carolyn, but when a youngster, she explained, "My mother gave me a frizzy permanent and everyone started calling me Harpo — and it stuck. Even teachers all through school called me Harpo." She still wears her hair curly, but not because of her nickname.

The daughters, Shawn, 12, Carrie Jo, 9, and Nicki, 4, have been tagged One, Two and Three by their father. "It's easier for Joe to remember them that way," Harpo said.

Joe's wife and daughters are avid racing fans. Until One started school, Harpo traveled all over the United States and into Canada with her husband. When the ban on women being in the pits was lifted, Harpo started scoring for her husband, she said. Scoring is timing each lap with a stopwatch. These times help the pit crew know when Joe needs to come in for fuel, what mileage he is getting and to keep him from running out of gas.

"I also do other things like polish the car and clean the windshield," Harpo said.

"I have never been frightened when Joe is racing," Harpo said. "Joe maintains his own car and his body is going to go in it. I don't think I could live with him and be afraid — I couldn't live with fear all the time."

With conviction in her big eyes, Harpo said, "I believe when it's your time to go, you'll go, and Joe told me, 'If I die on a race track, I went with a smile on my face.' I think it's wonderful he can spend his whole life doing what he likes — he is extremely happy."

Harpo admitted her husband has had some close calls in his stock car racing over the past five years. Once, she recalled, he was leading a race and on a red flag (caution to slow down as there is danger on the track), Joe pulled into the pit for fuel.

His car burst into flames. "Some little guy reached in and yanked Joe out. They (the crew) put the fire out and he went on to win the race."

Harpo met Joe Ruttman in Dearborn, Mich. "I had never seen a race in my life," she said. After they started dating, Joe kept asking Harpo to marry him — she kept putting him off.

"Finally," she said, "Joe told me when I was ready, I could ask him — and I did. We were married in 1965."

Harpo said she is luckier than most race car drivers wives because Joe took her into the stands and explained everything about racing. Their daughters are well educated to racing and spout track jargon glibly.

Nicki, the youngest, told her father one time, "If you don't beat the red car, don't come home!" The red car belongs to A.J. Foyt and Joe Ruttman did beat him.

Harpo said Nicki never stops yelling for her father from the start to finish of a race. She watches the lights and flags, and when she sees the checkered flag going down, she knows that ends the race. When Joe isn't first, she'll yell, "The race isn't over cause Daddy hasn't won yet."

Joe Ruttman does win a fair percentage of the different stock car categories in which he competes. In 1978, Harpo said he had an 80 percent win factor, and 1979 it was about 60 percent. The winning money is used to live on, Harpo explained, and the majority of it "goes right back into the cars."

Before Joe Ruttman was sponsored for tires, motors and other needs, everything he won was used on the cars, entry fees and traveling.

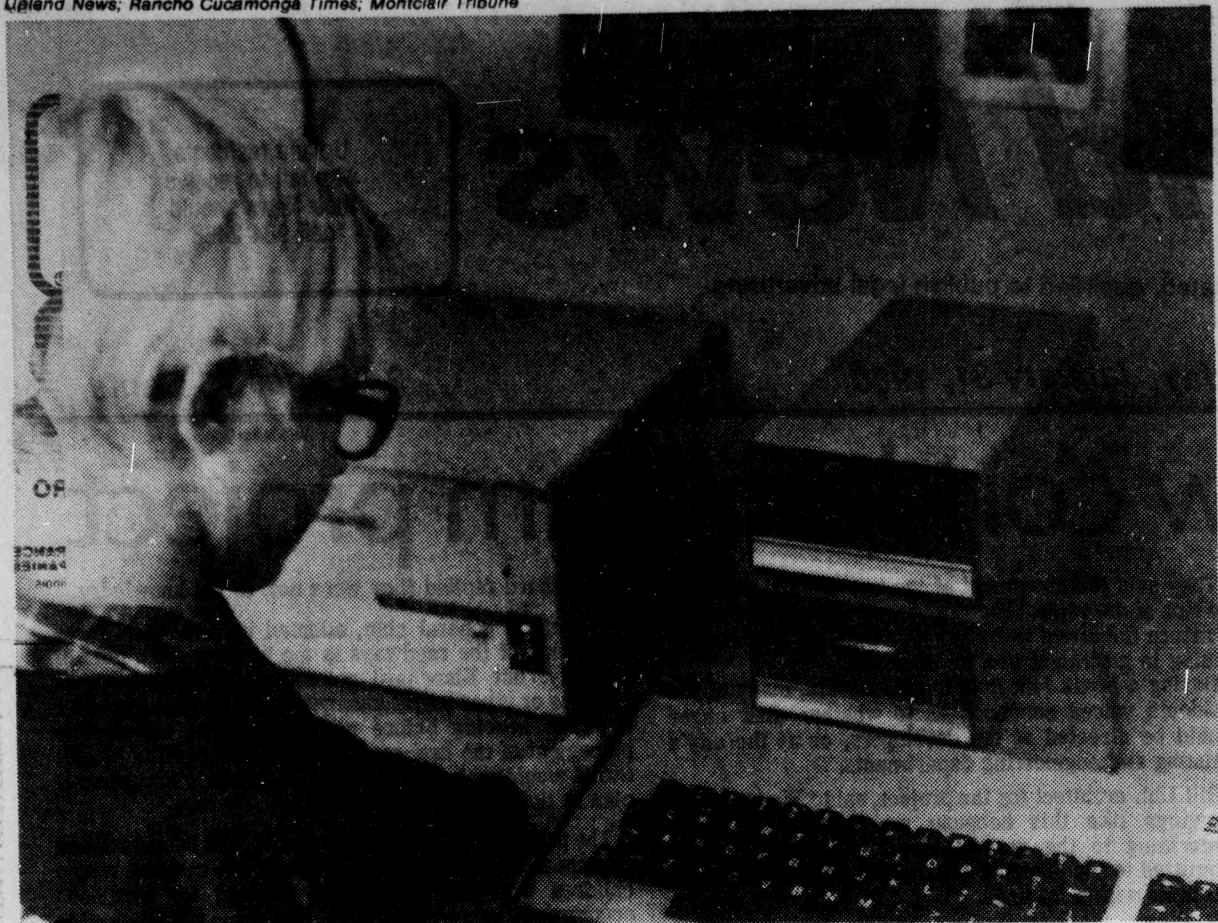

"We made do," Harpo said. "We just did without. We didn't have furniture for the first eight years of our marriage." In those days, she said, "No one gave us even a spark plug. Then someone must have said, 'He's pretty good, let's help him.'"

Harpo may have to stay home with the children during the winter racing season, but soon as school is out, she packs up the motor home. Traveling behind the vehicle hauling the race cars, Harpo and the kids head for Michigan. They make headquarters where Mom and Pop Ruttman and Harpo's mother live. From there, they follow Joe to all the summer races.

"I wouldn't trade my life with anyone," Harpo said.

Harpo Ruttman of Upland opens the door of the motorhome which she drives to be with her husband, Joe Ruttman, when he takes part in stock car races throughout the county. This is "home" to Harpo, Joe and their daughters, Shawn, Carrie Jo and Nicki in the summer. (Staff photo by Marge Gross)

Robby Lunsford, 8, a second grade student at Mt. Baldy School works on a problem on the school's $5,000 computer. Superintendent of the school H. Madison Lowe said the computer, which costs about the same as a poorly paid teaching assistant's salary for one year, is able to make math problems and composition work easier and more interesting for students. (Staff photo by Robert Lee)

Bleeps, whirs help Mt. Baldy students learn their subjects

With new and inexpensive computers coming on the market, more and more groups are finding they can afford them.

Even a small school district like the Mt. Baldy School, with about 100 students, has gotten into computers with a $5,000 "hybrid" that helps the students with everything from math to composition.

Superintendent H. Madison Lowe explained that since they started using the computer in the Fall of 1978, they have had no problems getting students to use it. Rather, they are finding it difficult to get enough hours in the day for all of them to use it.

The computer was the idea of Judy Ruggles, a parent in the district, who now runs the computer for the school.

She explained that with the increasing use of computers, the children using them today will probably have similar machines in

Museum director

named to new post

The director of Chaffey College's Rex Wagnall Museum, J.R. "Skip" Pahl, has been appointed assistant director of the San Bernardino County Museum.

Pahl, who spent six years at the Chaffey museum and was instrumental in establishing the carousel exhibit of Indian artwork and pottery, reportedly wants to improve the county's exhibition of Indian artifacts.

The county's museum is noted for its Indian basket collection and has an impressive collection of 18th-century clothing, including Indian costumes.

Pahl has been quoted as saying he would like to establish a council to work toward preserving these fragile materials and is looking for people who can sew or weave to volunteer to assist the museum. Anyone who would like to help should contact him at the museum.

No, there's no mistake on your gas bill.

If the size of your latest gas bill was a bit of a shock, you might think somebody made a mistake.

The simple truth is gas rates have gone up. And the colder weather we've had means you've been using more gas.

We know increased gas bills aren't easy to take and that you want to know why you're being charged more.

We buy more than 90% of our gas from out-of-state suppliers. And those suppliers are charging us more, for a number of reasons. As gas gets harder to find, exploration gets costlier. Double digit inflation makes things worse. And new federal law, designed to stimulate production, allows the wellhead price of gas to increase substantially.

All this means that the price we have to pay for gas has gone up more in the past seven months than in the last three years. Even so, with all energy costs rising, natural gas remains your best energy value.

Besides an explanation, we'd like to give you some tips on how to keep your gas bills as low as possible.

Heating and water heating account for up to 88% of the gas you use during the winter. So keep your thermostat at 68° or lower during the day and at 55° or off at night. Insulate your attic. And turn your water heater temperature control below the middle of the dial.

For more conservation information write us at "Winter Gas Savers," 810 S. Flower St., M.L. 28, Los Angeles 90017.

Saving gas can save you money. No mistake about it.

Staff Sgt. John Shone receives the Distinguished Flying Cross and the Purple Heart from Rep. Jim Lloyd during an awards ceremony at the Ontario Air National Guard Base. Shone earned the medals while a Navy lieutenant in Korea in 1951. The flying cross was awarded for his bombing attacks on four bridges and the Purple Heart for injuries received when he was shot down and crashed at sea. Although the awards were recorded during the Korean conflict, they were never presented to the flier until the omission was discovered by the congressman.

35th district received $430 million contracts

Businesses in the 35th Congressional District received over $430 million in defense contract awards for fiscal year 1978, according to Rep. Jim Lloyd, D-35th District.

"The 35th Congressional District has benefited from defense contracts in both jobs and business," Lloyd, a member of the House Armed Services Committee, said at the 6th Annual Congressional Breakfast in Pomona.

"There were 76 defense contractors in the district and more than $25 million went to the small businessman — the backbone of the district," Lloyd said.

"Major contractors include General Dynamics, FMC Corp. and Perkin Elmer Corp. of Pomona; Honeywell Inc. of West Covina; Data Design Laboratories of Rancho Cucamonga, and Lockheed Corp. of Ontario," said Lloyd. "These companies received over $400 million in defense contracts for fiscal year 1978."

"In 1979 alone, General Dynamics increased its work force by 1,300 from 5,700 to 7,000. Business is booming in the district and I intend to keep it that way as a member of the House Armed Services Committee," Lloyd concluded.

Chaffey could gain $600,000 legislation

By STEVE STANDERFER
Staff Writer

Legislation which could bring Chaffey College $600,000 in the next two fiscal years has cleared major hurdles in state Assembly committees in the past two weeks.

Steve Wallace, college legislative analyst and marketing director, made the announcement at a press conference.

The bill, AB 1176, will go to the Assembly floor this week for debate and it is expected to pass by Thursday without any problem. The bill will then go on to the Senate.

Wallace, along with district trustee Jimmy Gutierrez, helped draft the legislation which makes a technical clarification in the state financing measure for community colleges approved last year. The bill was introduced by Assemblymen Bill McVittie D-65th District, and Eugene Chappie, R-3rd District.

Wallace said that a change in the state community colleges' financing formulas caused the problem for Chaffey College along with Sierra College of Roseville. He explained that the revision through AB 1176 would make the base calculations for average daily attendance (ADA) in 1977-78 consistent with following years.

In 1978-79 when Chaffey's ADA dropped, the state no longer permitted the school to count some handicapped students in a non-credit program as part of the ADA while in 1977-78 they were counted.

Although Chaffey's ADA for credit programs from July 1 to Dec. 31, 1979 is up slightly over the same period last fiscal year, it is still well below the 1977-78 ADA which included the non-credit programs.

"If the college were to have the previous years, Chaffey College would be receiving more money," McVittie said two weeks ago.

The change in the funding formula resulted in an "oversight," said Wallace. "What the bill (AB 1176) does is that it seeks to correct that inequity."

Despite opposition the bill has been passed unanimously by four committees after some revisions.

On passage of the bill, Chaffey would be guaranteed $200,000 from the state school fund in July 1980. The other $400,000 could come to Chaffey in the summer of 1981 if there is a surplus from the 1980-81 fiscal year.

Tear gas workshops repeated

Due to the increase in requests for Chaffey College's tear gas workshop, four new dates have been set for repeat performances.

Four Thursday evenings, Feb. 14, Feb. 28, March 6 and March 20 from 7 to 10 p.m. now are open for community members and college students to register for this self-protection workshop. It is illegal for a private citizen to possess or use tear gas as a self-defense weapon except after having taken a special class.

A card for certification from the state for possession of mace will be issued at the end of the workshop. There is a $3.70 fee for the certification, required by the state. This is the only fee for this course.

To pre-register for this self-protection class offered by the college's administration of justice program, call one of Chaffey College's toll-free numbers: 987-1737, 822-4484 or 735-0242, extension 239. For the hearing-impaired the college has a special TTY number: 989-7638.

Show added to Cash appearance

The Johnny Cash show already scheduled for a 7 p.m. performance at Bridges Auditorium, Claremont, on Feb. 23, will add a second performance at 9:45 p.m., due to a demand for tickets, according to Michael Burney, director of The Claremont Colleges Center For The Performing Arts.

June Carter Cash and the Tennessee Three (who actually number five) will also be featured on the country music program.

Cash bought his first guitar while stationed in Germany during the Korean conflict.

There, he wrote one of his best known songs, "Folsom Prison Blues." When Cash returned to the United States, he enrolled in radio school and also began to record for Sun Records.

By the mid-60s, Cash was considered to be one of country music's superstars. Since that time, Cash has composed over 1,000 songs and has sold more than 50 million records. He has received 3 platinum and 10 gold albums in the United States alone, four Grammys and four Country Music Awards including the CMA Entertainer of the Year honor.

Tickets are available at Bridges box office, Mutual Ticket Agencies and by phone at 821-8032. Bridges Auditorium is located at Fourth and College Way in Claremont on the campus of The Claremont Colleges.

Art chairman will address joint meeting

Scripps Fine Arts Foundation will meet jointly with the Rembrandt Club on Feb. 7 at 1:30 p.m. in Thatcher Music building, Pomona College campus, Claremont.

Gerald Ackerman, Pomona College art department chairman, will talk on "19th Century French Sculpture" as a preview to the "Romantics to Rodin" exhibition which opens Feb. 26 at the Los Angeles County Museum of Art.

Tea will be served in Montgomery Gallery following the program.

First phase of six-part Chino Hills study shown

The first phase of a six-part study designed to provide the groundwork for the balanced development of the Chino Hills has been released by the project's planning consultants.

San Bernardino County Supervisor Robert Townsend, who is sponsoring the project, said the report will be turned over for study and comment to the blue ribbon Citizens Advisory Committee which has been organized to work with the consultants.

"I don't believe there is another report like this in the nation," Townsend said. "It is providing one specific plan and environmental impact report for a community of 17,000 acres. It will save thousands of dollars to developers who otherwise would have to file individual impact reports. Hopefully, the savings will be passed on to residents."

The study, compiled by consultants L.D. King, the Planning Center and EDWA, mostly sets forth what needs to be done. The other five phases of the study will deal with specific recommendations. The entire project is expected to take about two years to complete.

One of the major objectives of the project is to "establish a partnership between professional planners, developers, property owners, interest groups and the county" in the creation of a specific plan that will determine where housing will go, where shopping centers will be, where public services are needed and where roads should be built.

The 43-page report also takes into consideration the likelihood that much of the hills will be preserved by the state as open space, that Carbon Canyon Road — with its winding two-lane traffic — will not be enough to carry vehicles between San Bernardino and Orange counties, that much of the topography of the hills is not suited for building and that there will only be limited sewer and water facilities available for expansion.

Nevertheless, the county's planning department envisions a community of about 30,000 persons, living in perhaps 10,000 dwelling units in a 26-square-mile area between the City of Chino and the Orange County line, south of the Pomona Freeway and north of Soquel Canyon.

The planners say it will be necessary to widen Carbon Canyon Road to four lanes so it can carry more east-west traffic. But they also see the need for the extension of Grand Avenue from Diamond Bar across the hills, and Dudley Street from Phillips Ranch in Pomona to meet Grand Avenue.

Courses help with parenting, losing weight

If your New Year's resolutions included either losing some excess poundage or getting along better with your children, then you are in luck. The West End Family Counseling Service, a United Way and San Bernardino County-funded agency located in Ontario, will be starting classes in weight reduction/maintenance and parenting skills later this month and in early February.

The weight reduction program, dubbed "Purposeful Eating" by its originator and teacher Dr. Robert Sawicki, will be a repeat offering. The fall session of the innovative program proved so successful the course will be offered on two different days of the week this time to allow more area residents to take part in this unique learning experience.

An 8-week program based upon a psychological approach to the causes and cures for over-eating, both behavior modification ("you'll learn the correct way to eat") and insight techniques are employed in a non-threatening group setting. Interestingly, the development of self-awareness and personal growth share and course focus with losing pounds... You may choose either the Wednesday evening class which meets from 7:20 to 9:30 p.m. and begins Jan. 30 or the Saturday morning session which meets from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. and starts Feb. 2. Both classes meet once per week at the center, 855 N. Euclid Avenue (corner of "I") in Ontario, and the fee for the eight weeks is $50.

Dr. David Steinberger, a county child psychologist and West End staff member, will conduct a 9-week course in Systematic Training in Effective Parenting (S.T.E.P.) designed to teach workable alternatives to punishment and to increase emotional closeness between parent and child. A number of community organizations and agencies have previously sponsored Dr. Steinberger's presentation of the program.

Limited to an enrollment of 10 couples or a total of 20 individuals, the first class session is slated for Tuesday from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. The fee for the class is $30 per individual, or $50 per couple (and $5 for study materials).

A six-hour, one-day, workshop will be offered to parents of pre-adolescent children on Feb. 23 from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Some of the issues to be covered in this lecture discussion workshop will be assisting children to develop values; helping them to learn ways of behaving that will assist them in being accepted and productive in society; learning ways of interacting within family life that will produce a smooth, happy relationship where parents feel respected and children feel good as a human being. Specific issues of discipline, communication and the every day problems involving pre-adolescent children will be considered.

The one-day workshop will be offered by Bryn Hoffman, a licensed clinical social worker and West End Family Counseling staff member. The fee for the class will be $15 per individual, $20 for couples. You are invited to bring your questions, your answers, and your willingness to explore the thoughts and ideas involved with raising pre-adolescent children.

The West End Family Counseling Service under the leadership of Executive Director, C. Richard Mitchell, counts among its staff members psychologists, social workers and a doctor of theology in addition to two consulting psychiatrists.

For more information and registration call the West End Family Counseling Service at 983-2020 - Monday through Thursday 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. or Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Girl Scout workshop scheduled

"You Don't Have to Take a Hamburger Camping," "Let's Pretend" and "Everybody Wins" are but a few of the 14 different workshops being offered by Spanish Trails Girl Scout Council. The all-day event titled "I can make a difference" is for all adults who work with girls as leaders, troop helpers or interested adults is being held on Feb. 6 at the La Verne College Activities Center. The workshops are one and a half hours each. The time will be from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m., making it possible for those who attend to come for a portion of the day or the entire time.

Adults are invited to come and learn a new skill or increase their knowledge of an old one. New ideas for activities which can be used for all girls 5-17 will be offered. There will be non-competitive games, basic needlepointing, recipes for vegetarian cooking and finding out which glue will stick what.

For more information call the council office at (213) 331-7325 or (714) 623-2518.

Copley News Service

The pleasant little woman who pushed her cart up beside mine in the supermarket said: "Sir, you are dripping something all over the floor."

And I was. It was the juice of three large, ripe tomatoes. They had dribbled up or down every aisle from the bottled drinking water to the cooking oil and red wine vinegar.

The little woman said: "You've got to know how to load a shopping cart. Heavy things should go on the bottom. They have mashed your tomatoes."

That being the case, why were fresh vegetables shown first on my shopping list? Wouldn't that indicate they were to be picked up first? This was only one of the annoyances I have suffered as a novice grocery shopper since a certain resident of my property broke her leg.

I keep asking myself why a woman doesn't send a guy to buy things that are easy to identify.

Now let's take canned celery hearts.

You cover 50 feet of shelves loaded with canned goods, reading every label until you give up from a crick in the neck.

And the help is no help. Perhaps the turnover in grocery clerks is so fast, one never really learns the stock. Three of them directed me to canned celery hearts and all the three were wrong. A fourth was right. He said: "Turn your eyes over your right shoulder and you'll be looking right at them."

During the lonely, desperate moments when you need to be told where to find an item, you look around for other men doing the family shopping. But no others are that unfortunate.

Once in a while you see a man pushing a cart but his wife is right there providing the expertise. In fact, in my three-week career as a supermarket shopper, I have seen only two lone men. One had been lucky enough to find two cans of soup and the second was a drinking fellow who had popped in for a jug.

The frozen foods section really offers an interesting expedition. You not only move through arctic temperatures, you read the label on every frozen box to make sure you get exactly what you want. Picking the boxes up in your bare hands.

At first, my old-fashioned upbringing asserted itself: ladies first. But I wanted to beat it down — and, hey, I found it!

Once at the express counter, that old-fashioned upbringing played a shabby trick on me. I let a woman go ahead of me because she had only two items — even though I was in a hurry.

She paid her bill by check — which is against the rules in the first place — and this was an out-of-town check. That called for an OK from the store manager and it took 10 minutes.

Your husband's cookbook

Chili con carne and cole slaw

Chili Con Carne
Coleslaw
Iced Beer
Fruit in Season

If cooking can be called a science, it is an inexact science. Some people would have it otherwise — a quarter-of-a-teaspoon of this and an eighth-of-a-teaspoon of that — but these are the same kind of people who enjoy balancing checkbooks. Of all the dishes we're going to make together, this is one of the least exact.

A few years ago, a national magazine had the temerity to publish "the world's best chili recipe." Sheer nonsense. There is no one best chili recipe; there are dozens, hundreds. Fortunately, however, we will be serving this one in the company of the world's best coleslaw recipe.

The Staples: Make sure these are on hand: vegetable oil, fresh garlic, chili powder, celery salt, cumin seeds, caraway seeds, oregano, cayenne pepper, salt, eggs, flour, sugar, mustard and cider vinegar.

The Shopping List: One pound of dry kidney beans; two pounds of chuck steak, not counting the bone; four medium-sized onions; one large can of Italian plum tomatoes; one head of fresh cabbage; one small sour cream (or yogurt); beer; crackers; fruit in season.

The Night Before: Soak the beans overnight in cool water. There are some people who would tell you that you can get away with opening a can of pre-cooked beans, but don't listen to them.

Early in the Day: Bring the beans to a low boil and then cut the heat back, allowing them to simmer until tender, about three to four hours. One way to test for tenderness is to blow on a bean and see if the skin breaks. (Caution! Since this looks at least mildly ridiculous, don't let anyone see you doing this.)

Also Early in the Day: As the beans are simmering, you can make the cooked dressing for the world's best coleslaw.

This is a little tricky. If you bomb out, try it a second time. If you bomb out a second time, you may want to consider mayo with a splash of vinegar.

Melt a quarter-of-a-stick of butter in a saucepan over low heat. (Danger! Very low heat, or else the eggs will scramble.) Add two beaten eggs, a large spoon of sugar, a large daub of mustard and a half-cup of cider vinegar. Keep stirring gently over low heat. In 10 minutes or so it will thicken all at once and you will remove it from the heat. (Danger! If you don't remove it at once, you may want to feed it to the dog while it is still warm.) Add a small container of sour cream (or yogurt) and put dressing in the refrigerator to cool.

3:30 PM: Now, while the salad dressing is cooling, turn your attention to the chili itself. Chili sauce, like spaghetti sauce lends itself to experimentation.

Begin by cutting the chuck steak into chunks and dusting the chunks with flour. (The easiest way to do this is to put both meat and flour in a brown paper bag and shake.) Cook the meat in a small amount of oil over medium heat until it turns brown. Chop up the onions and mince the cloves of garlic; add this to the meat and cook for five or 10 minutes — just until the onions start to turn brown at the edges. Stir in half the tomatoes. Then the spices — a pinch of celery salt, a large pinch of cumin seeds, another of oregano, a healthy dose of salt and cayenne pepper, and then the chili powder itself. Try two tablespoonsful. Taste. Oh, add another one. (Caution! It is always easy to add chili powder, not to easy to subtract it.) Simmer the sauce over low heat until the meat is tender, at least two hours.

San Dimas Press; LaVerne Leader; The Bulletin; Upland News; Rancho Cucamonga Times; Montclair Tribune

5:30 PM: Now add about half the pre-cooked kidney beans. And taste. At this point you can add more beans, more tomatoes or more chili powder — let your taste be your guide. Grate or chop the cabbage. Add the dressing along with a small handful of caraway seeds. You have just made the world's best coleslaw.

There is nothing to do after this except serve the chili hot and the slaw cold, accompanied by enough beer to give your palate an occasional rinse.

The show is now scheduled for six performances, all at 8 p.m. at Citrus College Auditorium. Dates are Feb. 15 and 16, nd Feb. 21 through 24.

The hit Broadway musical, with such favorite songs as "If I Were a Rich Man," "To Life!" and "Sunrise, Sunset," will be presented at the college with full orchestra, outstanding stage sets and exciting choreography.

Director of "Fiddler on the Roof" is H. K. Baird, who is director of theatre productions, Charter Oak School District. Music director is Ben Bollinger, director of choral organizations, Citrus College. Greg Hinrichsen will provide set design and concept; choreography is by Susan Massey.

Reserved seat tickets may be purchased at Citrus College Auditorium Box Office, open weekday afternoons, or by calling (213) 963-9411, weekday afternoons. Visa and Master Charge cards are honored. Free planetarium shows Citrus College Planetarium will present four free shows in February that will focus on the trips to Jupiter by Voyager I and Voyager II and other information about the journeys, as supplied by Jet Propulsion Laboratory, Pasadena.

Dates are Feb. 4, 14, 21 and 28. All shows are at 7 p.m. and last about one hour.

Jupiter I, which was launched from Florida in September 1977, was closest to Jupiter, and obtained photographs, on March 5, 1979. Jupiter II, the slower of the two, was launched in August 1977 and obtained its closest position on July 9, 1979.

The two Voyagers will continue on to Saturn, Uranus and on to deep space. On board is a copper disc with greetings from earth in 60 languages, plus natural sounds of earth, including animals and the surf, in case there are beings in outer space who may intercept the spaceship in years to come.

The four Citrus College shows will be presented by Kent Miller, astronomy instructor at Citrus College. Additional information about the planetarium programs may be obtained by calling Citrus College Office of Community Services, (213) 335-0521 or (714) 599-8339, extension 210.

Council for peace

A discussion of the present world situation by Dr. Harold Fey, and a showing of an unusual film, "The Last Slide Show," will take place on Sunday evening, February 3 at 7:30 p.m. at the Claremont Friends Meeting House, 727 Harrison Ave., Claremont.

The meeting is sponsored by the Pomona Valley Council for Peace. All are invited to attend; there is no admission charge.

Dr. Harold Fey, formerly editor of the Christian Century magazine, and a long-time member of the Fellowship of Reconciliation, is a strong advocate for peace. He will discuss the effects of the present world situation on the Salt II Treaty, our defense budget, and other factors which affect our lives and the prospects for peace.

The film, "The Last Slide Show," to be presented by Hans Hehnke, deals with a point in time in the future after people had made the decision to do away with nuclear weapons. It points out what could have happened if that decision had not been made. The film also presents a history of the weapons of war.

Meeting moved

The La Verne-San Dimas Business and Professional Women's Club has canceled its regular meeting Tuesday, Feb. 5, and will meet instead Thursday, Feb. 7, for dinner with the Mountain Section of BPW.

"Hypnivation" (hypnosis plus motivation) will be the topic of speaker Kathleen Morris.

Heating your roof is for the birds.

It costs plenty to heat your home these days. So it pays to keep the heat in the rooms you live in.

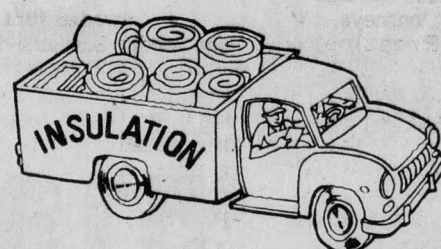

When heat escapes through the roof, that's for the birds. You're wasting dollars and precious energy, too.

There's one way to save both. Insulation in the attic will keep the heat where it belongs. It's an easy job. You can even do it yourself.

And the costs? The savings you'll make on heating bills will soon pay back your investment. And Uncle Sam gives you a tax credit for insulating, too.

Do you have air conditioning? All the more reason to insulate. You'll save year-round.

Insulate.

Shooting Stars

In 1970s, photography gained new recognition

By JERRY WINDLE
Copley News Service

Perhaps one of the most significant advances for photography as a whole during the last decade was its wide acceptance as a true art form.

Photographic prints now are bringing sums at auctions in the thousands of dollars. More and more galleries and museums recognize photography as an art, and the 1980s will see increased enthusiasm for its art aspects.

What about the hardware used in photography?

Film itself underwent several changes during the 1970s. Film speeds increased significantly, making available - light photography a reality even for the novice.

Color film underwent perhaps the most radical changes. Speeds for color slide film went higher and higher until ASA 400 speed films now are available at the corner drugstore.

Color negative film came to the fore in the late '70s and I think you will be seeing more of it in the future. With a standard ASA of 400, photographers have the ability to use color negative materials the same as they use black-and-white film. Now any color corrections can be made at the printing stage rather than at the shooting stage, as is the case with color slide film.

Being able to control color in the darkroom is the big plus for color negative film, and in the future publications will begin accepting color prints along with color slides.

Cameras also underwent radical changes in the '70s. The 35mm format secured its hold on the professional market. The amateur market took to the 110 film size which has virtually, or will eventually, overpower the instamatic format.

Cameras using the small 110 film have been designed with good optical systems which allow prints as large as 8 by 10 to be made from the tiny negatives. I foresee still more improvement in this area. Even now, 110 cameras with interchangeable lenses are appearing on the market, so look for this field to expand and perhaps even compete with the 35mm cameras during the 1980s.

The 35mm camera has almost reached the zenith of perfection. Now totally automated, using it is only a matter of pointing and letting it do the rest. The camera computes f-stops, shutter speeds, or both, and even makes the settings without the photographer having to do so much as turn a knob or dial.

Along with cameras, the metering systems, which now come standard as built-in equipment on the 35mm cameras, have been really improved over the versions available in the early '70s. Again, all of these improvements have been made to free the photographer from the mechanics so he can concentrate on the compositional and creative side of photography.

The instant - photo market also made great strides in the '70s. The Polaroid empire rose to the challenge of Kodak. They came back with instant movies which have met with limited success. But now there are two major manufacturers in the instant field and more improvements are on the horizon. Polaroid introduced the automatic focusing camera late in the '70s and I would expect Kodak to come up with something similar or better in the '80s.

Videotape machines and materials boomed on the market in the late '70s and are only the tip of the iceberg. As products become more sophisticated and are priced within the reach of more people, I predict you will experience a major revolution in the field of motion picture photography.

Better than instant movies in that the tapes can be used over and over again, the field of video will become the photography of the future.

As the market has grown for the photographer, both amateur and professional, so have the services available. Rental darkrooms have become plentiful for the photographer who wants to do his own work but doesn't want to make the investment to set up his own darkroom.

Support for cancer patients

Group forming to share hope, faith

By LINDA BERGSTEDT
Panorama Editor

"Now I'm making one day into five and I want to share my hope, my faith and what I've learned with others."

These are the words of Walter Keller of Ontario, a cancer patient, who wants to share his optimism and encouragement with other cancer patients.

Suffering from a disease, particularly a serious one, can be a lonely and frightening experience.

These feelings of separateness and fear often are compounded when that illness or disease is cancer.

For cancer is a word still found unacceptable for discussion in many circles.

The very word instills unfounded fear of contagion in the listener. Victims of the disease often are avoided by others which only serves to increase the patient's feelings of seclusion.

"I call it the silent disease," Keller said.

In order to help others like himself, Keller is forming a cancer-support group in Ontario. He knows from personal experience of the great benefit to be gained from such groups.

Keller, who is receiving chemotherapy treatments at the Jerry Pettis Memorial Veterans' Administration Hospital in Loma Linda, has attended meetings of the oncology group at that hospital.

"There is a great need for a support group," he said in a recent interview.

"The group should be here for people who need the support and it will come into being," he said with determination.

A former alcoholic, Keller has been keeping a daily diary since Sept. 25, 1972. "That's the day I put booze down and began to keep a daily inventory of my life."

"Those years of drinking were a kind of school I was in, so I could learn," he said. After he quit drinking, he became a drug and alcohol abuse counselor.

Then cancer struck.

Keller received his first chemotherapy treatment on July 2, 1979, and had his eighth treatment a few days ago.

"That first day I was to receive chemo, I met a man at the VA hospital named John. I told him how afraid I was. If it hadn't been for him, I would have run out, not taken the treatment."

When treatment began, Keller was told to stop working, but he decided that wasn't in the cards for him.

"I went back to work Aug. 2 for two hours and now work eight hours a day as a painter," he said.

"I asked God to give me the strength so I could work," he said.

When Keller returned to the VA hospital for a treatment in mid-November 1979, a physician told him he had from four to seven years to live.

"I told him I had been searching for God all my life and today I guess I had met him. Then I told him, 'Man doesn't determine life. The great physician is God,'" Keller said.

"How can someone tell me I'm going to die when I've never lived? Is what one patient said in the oncology group at the hospital. 'How do I crowd all this in?'"

"I feel good about myself now. I told the priest, 'Today, now, I am at peace and I am looking at life,'" said Keller who believes that man is a trinity of body, mind and spirit.

In his daily diary, Keller has been keeping track of the side affects of his chemotherapy treatments, how each affects him not only physically, but mentally and spiritually.

"I am compiling a book for my children," he explained, adding that writing keeps him together and is good therapy.

He said when dealing with pain, he thinks of the pain and agony Jesus suffered in carrying his cross.

"My pain is nothing to that," he said. "And I am no Jesus freak."

"A New Page" is the name Keller has selected for the support group for cancer patients that is meeting the first and third Mondays of each month from 7 to 8:30 p.m. in the Music Room of the Ontario City Library.

He got the inspiration for this name from his 84-year-old mother with whom he was reunited after 16 years and "a lot of pages."

"She told me, 'Walter, we can begin a new page today,'" he recalled.

In the group, participants will be talking about cancer, learning to cope, sharing experiences, strengths and hopes and "writing new pages of a full life."

The group will encompass all present and former cancer patients, their families and guests. Persons who have a loved one hospitalized with cancer, may contact Keller to request a group member to visit the patient and offer support.

Persons interested in the group may call Keller at 983-1789 or 982-0107.

Gold isn't only lure to treasure hunters

There's gold in them thar hills. And with the price hovering around $630 an ounce, looking for it is becoming an attractive proposition. Whether its prospecting for gold or hunting "treasure" with a metal detector, it is one of the few hobbies that, if a person is lucky, will pay for itself.

Steve Ryland, who teaches continuing education course at Cal Poly, Pomona, in gold prospecting and runs a prospecting store in Pasadena, explained that treasure is anything somebody else is willing to buy. He said the successful treasure hunter will look for a variety of items.

"In most accounts of treasure, people think of pirates, lost mines and things like that," said Ryland. "Most of the treasures people find, and I know a number of people who purportedly make their living at it, are things like the old man who buried his money next to a tree stump, or granddad's $20 gold piece."

"The stories of treasure like the Lost Dutchman mine probably are not true," he said. "They have grown up in legend so much that although they may have had some validity they probably don't exist."

Ann Belle of N & A Belle Electronics in Ontario, which carries metal detectors and prospecting equipment explained that one of her customers once rented a metal detector to look for buried tanks in the desert. Not the kind that hold water, but the World War II variety.

She explained that the man expects to make $1 million selling the tanks for scrap metal.

Although few people will manage to do more than help pay for their expenses, treasure hunting and prospecting are among the few hobbies that make money.

"As far as telling a person they're going to get rich, we can't because few do," said Mrs. Belle. "But it is one of the few hobbies where you really make money."

Using metal detectors has been a popular pastime for years, but recently, with the price of gold increasing dramatically, prospecting for it is beginning to pick up in popularity.

"It's almost to the point that it's getting to be more than a hobby," said Ryland.

And Mrs. Belle said that with the boom in the gold market she is experiencing a mini-boom in the sales of prospecting equipment.

"More and more people are deciding to try their hand at it," she said.

In prospecting, the old adage "gold is where you find it" applies. Ryland explained that the best places to look are where gold has been found before. He estimated that, despite the numerous gold rushes spaced throughout the history of California, only 10 percent of the recoverable gold in the state has been mined.

Despite all the gold taken out of streams, explained Mrs. Belle, more washes down each year.

"We've found that in years when there are heavy rains people are going to find more gold because it washes down," said Mrs. Belle. "Every year it replenishes."

The Mother Lode country of Northern California is still the best place to look, said Ryland. But a number of Southern California areas hope of a find for the weekend prospector.

He explained that the most popular areas locally are Lytle Creek, Big Bear and the east fork of San Gabriel Canyon.

In local streams, said Ryland, the average person working with a gold pan can, with a little luck and persistence, come up with visible amounts of gold.

But, he warned that some people can spend all day and find nothing while others may find a nugget of good size after a relatively short period.

Whether the individual finds nothing, or hits a "hot" area and comes up with several nuggets, Ryland said the odds are that no one will get rich as a weekend prospector.

For those who think the idea of spending the day digging up a stream bottom for a few flecks of gold is too strenuous, metal detectors will tell the treasure hunter when he's found something.

Although some success has been reported in using metal detectors for gold prospecting in Australia, the detectors are best used in finding lost items and have few applications in gold mining.

Mrs. Belle said however that the two, prospecting and metal detectors, are generally used by the same people.

"We feel it's more or less one hobby," she said. "People may start with a detector or they may start panning, but usually they'll come back to the other half."

Ryland explained that the advantage of using both a detector and panning is that if the individual strikes out with one he might find something with the other.

A treasure hunter may never find gold at an old mining camp, but could come away with a fortune in antiques, Ryland said.

Metal detectors come in a variety of models from the simpler models that will pick up coins under a few inches of sand to more sophisticated models with discriminators that allow the individual to pass over the "junk" and get to the "good stuff."

Mrs. Belle said that, depending on the individual and how often he uses his metal detector, it is possible to pay for the machines in a year or two.

But persistence and knowing how to use the machine are essential, she added.

Ryland said the biggest problem with detectors isn't the machines but the people who won't take the time to learn how to use them.

"Most people get a detector, use it for a week, and put it in the closet," he said.

Not everyone is going to find a diamond ring with a metal detector, and even the most experienced operator comes up with his share of "junk," Ryland said.

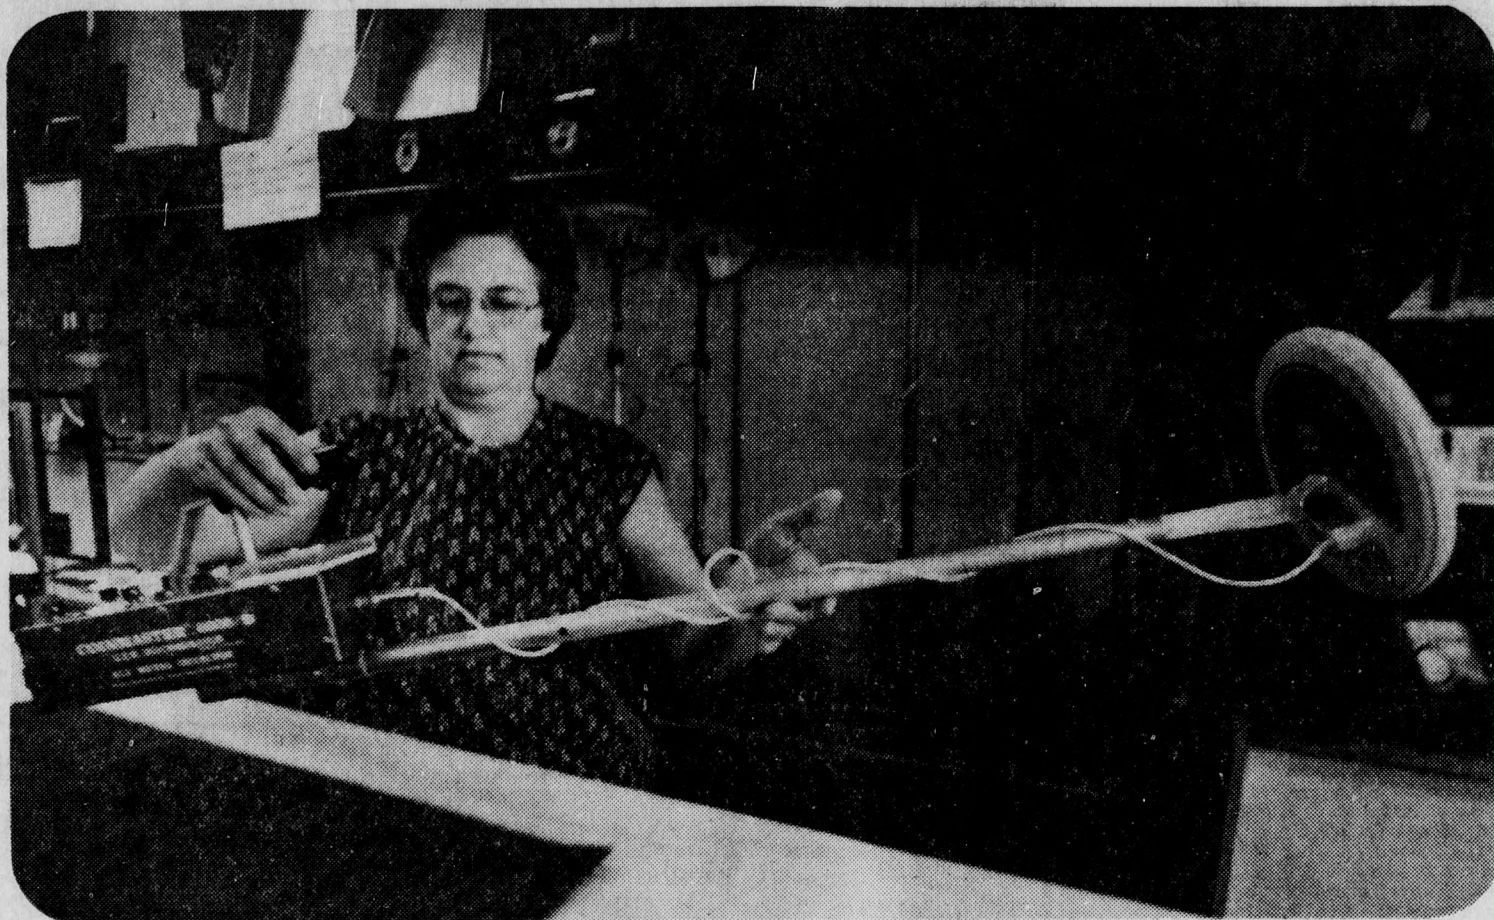

Ryland said every area also has its shortcomings.

At the beach, he explained, sand and salt water often cause the detector to give off false readings. In parks, the operator has to contend with 10,000 pull tabs.

Ryland said finding the places to look takes common sense and being a good judge of where people are most likely to lose money.

And he added the value in what is found may lie more in what it contains than what it is. With the price of silver climbing as fast as gold, said Ryland, checking the age of coins found on the beach is a must.

"If it was merely finding pennies," said Ryland. "Nobody would make any money."

Ann Belle of N & A Belle Electronics in Ontario shows off one of the metal detectors offered in the store.

Feature

Finding equipment not easy task

Since few stores specialize in metal detectors or prospecting equipment, it is important to shop around, according to Steve Ryland, the owner of a prospecting store in Pasadena.

Ryland, who also teaches a continuing education class in prospecting at Cal Poly, Pomona, said the equipment used by the weekend prospector or treasure hunter can run from a few inexpensive items to elaborate dredges and metal detectors.

But for someone starting out in the hobby, he recommends starting small.

Metal detectors were originally developed during World War II for use in finding land mines. The early detectors were generally unstable and not very accurate.

"It's surprising they found as many mines as they did," said Ryland.

Modern detectors, however, come with a variety of features including discriminators which allow the operator to pass over "junk" items and find the "good stuff," said Ryland.

The most important factor in using a metal detector is how experienced the operator is and not how sophisticated a detector he has, Ryland explained.

Metal detectors run from $50 to $500 depending on the number and variety of features they offer.

"And you can get them down as cheap as $20," said Ryland. "But at that point they become toys."

Ryland recommended anyone starting out in the hobby begin with an inexpensive detector and move up as their skill with the machine improves.

"If they're finding 10 pop tabs for every coin, but still persisting at it, they may want to move up to a more sophisticated detector," he said.

The more expensive detectors are generally of good quality but the buyer should be cautious with the more inexpensive models.

"When you get to detectors that are less than $100 there are a lot around that are marginal," said Ryland.

In looking to buy a detector, Ryland recommended choosing a store that carries detectors from two or three different manufacturers and avoiding anyplace that gives a hard sell on a more expensive model.

He added that where possible one should find a store where one of the salesmen uses the equipment himself, check what a particular model can and cannot do (not every detector can do everything), and check on the manufacturer's warranty.

In prospecting, the basic piece of equipment is the gold pan, which can be anything from a 12-inch pie pan to special plastic gold pans with "cheater riffles" to help trap the gold.

The next step up is the sluice box, a long box with riffles in the bottom that allow flowing water to wash away lighter material and trap heavier particles of gold.

Sluice boxes can also be attached to motorized dredges which will vacuum up the sand and gravel from the bottom of streams.

In prospecting equipment, said Ryland, the hobbyist can generally equip himself for between $40 and $50.

Although the hobbyist can start out with nothing more than a pan, Ryland recommended also purchasing an inexpensive sluice box, a folding shovel, a rock hammer, a magnifying glass, a tool for digging out cracks between rocks, a glass vial for holding the gold and a good book on gold panning.

Ryland said special plastic gold pans run under $5 and generally for $2 or $3. Sluice boxes can run from $20 to $40, but most books on gold panning give instructions on how to build an inexpensive wooden one.

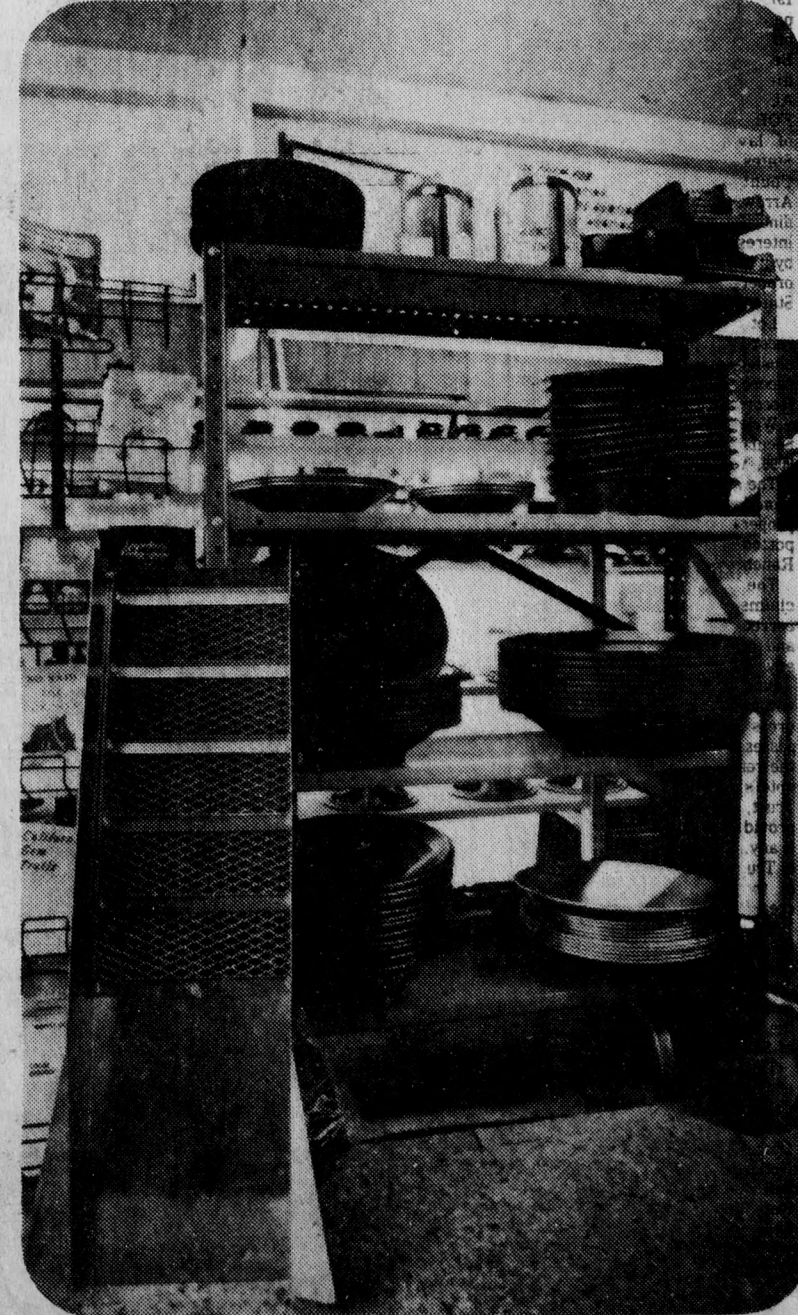

And for those who want to get into something more elaborate, or who've found a "hot" area, dredges start at $400 and go up to "more than anyone would want to pay," said Ryland.

Nick Belle of N & A Belle Electronics in Ontario gives the median strip along Euclid Avenue the once over with one of the metal detectors he sells in his store.

Detectors come in a variety of sizes and price ranges from $50 to $500. Some detectors are also equipped with discriminators that allow the operator to pass over "junk" such as pull tabs and find the "good stuff" such as coins and jewelry.

tool of prospecting remains the gold pan. The pans come in a variety of designs today, featuring "cheater riffles" to help trap gold. A step up from the pan is the sluice box which washes away lighter sand and gravel and traps gold and heavier black sand in a mesh of riffles.

Metal detectors offer a wide variety of features, but not every detector can do everything. A person buying a detector should look for a store that carries two or three different lines; ask the clerk if they have used the detector; and avoid any store where the salesman gives a hard sell on a more expensive model.

AN ORDINANCE OF THE CITY OF SAN DIMAS SETTING FORTH THE DUTIES AND RESPONSIBILITIES OF THE ELECTED MAYOR AND AMENDING THE SAN DIMAS MUNICIPAL CODE
The City Council of the City of San Dimas does hereby ordain as follows:
SECTION 1 Title 2, Chapter 2.06 entitled "Duties of the Elected Mayor" is hereby added to the Municipal Code to read as follows:
2.06.010 Historical Background
On November 6, 1979, the voters of the City of San Dimas approved a ballot measure providing for the direct election of the mayor and establishing the term of office as two years. The ballot proposition materials and the argument in favor of the proposition provided only that the mayor be elected by the people and not that there be any additional and greater duties and/or responsibilities assumed by or delegated to the elected mayor than has historically been associated with the mayor of San Dimas. The purpose of this ordinance is to clarify the duties and responsibilities of the elected mayor.
2.06.015 Duties of Elected Mayor
The elected mayor shall:
A. Conduct all meetings of the City Council;
B. Represent the City and the City Council at ceremonies and public functions;
C. Sign documents on behalf of the City of San Dimas;
D. Issue proclamations on behalf of the San Dimas City Council.
2.06.020 General Provisions
The elected mayor shall receive the same compensation as is received by other members of the City Council. The relationship between the mayor and the City Manager shall be as provided in the Municipal Code for the relationship between the City Manager and members of the City Council. Appointments to various commissions and/or committees of the City shall be upon the basis of three affirmative votes of members of the City Council based on nominations from the members of the City Council.
2.06.250 Duties of the Vice Mayor
In the absence of the elected mayor, the vice mayor shall perform the functions and duties of the mayor as set forth herein. In the case of a vacancy in the office of mayor for any reason, the Council shall fill the vacancy by appointment. If the Council fails to fill it within 30 days, it shall call an election to fill the vacancy to be held on the next established election date to be held not less than 90 days thereafter. A person appointed or elected to fill a vacancy shall hold office for the unexpired term of the former incumbent.
SECTION 2 This Ordinance shall take effect thirty (30) days after its final passage, and within fifteen (15) days after its passage, the City Clerk shall publish a summary of the same in the San Dimas Press, a newspaper of general circulation in the City of San Dimas hereby designated for that purpose.
PASSED, APPROVED AND ADOPTED This 22nd day of January, 1980.
MARVIN ERSHER
Mayor of the City of San Dimas

Aggressive achievers fail in retirement life

By ROBERT P. STUDER
Copley News Service
BERKELEY — Joe has been an aggressive achiever all his life — hard-hitting, motivated toward success, dedicated to the job. As a result, he's done well in the business world. He's the epitome of the successful man.

Jim, on the other hand, has played a more passive role — not as much success, not as many promotions, not as much dedication to the job — but he has managed to save a significant part of his life for other interests and his family.

Now, as happens to all men, the years have crept by and it is time to retire. What now?

Suddenly, the priorities have reversed. Now it is Jim who may be the one who will fare best. The very qualities that meant success for Joe in their early years may pave the way for failure in retirement. In fact, according to a new study by two University of California at Berkeley researchers, successful men like Joe have the highest suicide rate and that means the highest rate of unhappiness.

Researchers Carol L. Huffine and Warren Breed explain it this way:

"Men traditionally build a life around ambition, hard work and perfection. This lifestyle results in rigidity and compulsiveness rather than adaptability, which is what enables individuals to survive crises of all kinds including the transition to old age."

Huffine is a research sociologist with the Institute of Human Development at UCB. Breed is an independent research associate with the Scientific Analysis Corp. which also is in Berkeley. They report their findings in a new book, "Psychotherapy of Aging," published by Academic Press.

They point to statistics like these:

— Men in their late 40s are twice as likely to commit suicide as women.

— By the time they reach their mid-70s, they are seven times more likely than women to take their own lives.

— The suicide rate for women peaks before age 50 and declines steadily after that.

They have reached their conclusions, the two researchers said, "by applying human development theories to known suicide trends."

As for women, they add, the very traits which the women's liberation advocates view as psychologically and intellectually crippling may explain the anomaly.

"The qualities of life for the American man do not change much after the first few years of adulthood and marriage," Huffine and Breed point out. "In his developmental process, each stage prepares him for the next, and the demands and expectations on him are consistent throughout. He is expected to be assertive, to seek mastery over his environment and to strive for achievement."

And, they said, "when the man's work role does change — at retirement — the change is abrupt and dramatic. From full-time work he goes suddenly to no work at all. From interpersonal relations with many job associates, few remain. From feelings of accomplishment in a task that he considers worth doing, there is nothing. The individual response to this drastic shift varies but for many it is a wrenching loss."

Thus, "adaptability," the research has disclosed, is the key to survival in retirement.

But there are some other factors, too. Those who are unmarried, especially the widowed or divorced and therefore the particularly lonely, are more likely to commit suicide.

Physical disabilities and illnesses also tend to increase chances of suicide, especially for those over 60.

Lower-economic-strata men are also more likely to commit suicide than upper- or middle-class men, the researchers point out.
